

I am a listener of the radio station K-LOVE (106.7 in our area. I have become aware that the FCC is considering a policy whereby Low Power FM stations would take priority over FM translators. I would urge that this change not be made. I feel that a national network like K-LOVE provides wholesome, uplifting, encouraging music and programming in a high quality manner which could not be equalled by local stations. It provides Christian music on a high power signal over wide areas that otherwise would have access to this type of programming. It has the ability to engage the minds and attentions of young people on things that are positive and good.

If there is a concern that local programming must take precedence, perhaps it would be appropriate to require that a national network like K-Love cut away periodically to provide local news and weather, or local public interest programming.

I urge you strenuously to reconsider the proposed action.
